

Figure 1: Hierarchy of tasks learned. Gray nodes denote the built-in functions of the robot, and white nodes represent the tasks learned from the curriculum. For built-in actions that involve an object (e.g., close), the object must be within the field of view for the action to be taken. Special actions (i.e., done and quit) are omitted due to space constraints.